“Homecoming: A Vietnam Vets Journey” follows over 300 Vietnam Vets and their supporters making a healing pilgrimage on motorcycles from California across the United States of America to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. The film focuses on five courageous men on a journey across America and through their own lives. A Journey that leads them to their emotional, physical and spiritual "Homecoming".

Homecoming aired on public television several years ago to engaged audiences and critical acclaim. When it came time to program this years Memorial day for the Ft. Hood community and central Texas at large, KNCT –TV Program Manager Ruth Wedergreen searched her memory for an appropriate show. “Since our station serves the Fort Hood Army installation, we have many veterans and active duty members in our viewing audience. "Homecoming" will now reach people who never saw the film on its first release. I know it will be a powerful experience for all who watch it.” Homecoming will air On KNCT-TV Memorial Day, May 31st at 7pm and again on Saturday, June 5th at 2pm.

Eric Christiansen director, editor, producer explains, “Homecoming: A Vietnam Vets Journey” is a very intense, personal look at people on the path to grief recovery. I feel that no matter what your background, you will be able to empathize with these very real people who are brave enough to walk through this path and follow it to recovery.” Christiansen continues, “It is a great honor for this film to show on this day in this community. It has always been my personal goal that my films facilitate healing. I hope and pray that my film touches this community in a positive way.”

The film’s showing will be dedicated to the memory of “Jungle Jim” Grainger, US Army Staff Sergeant 1st Battalion / 327th Infantry of the 101st Airborne - Vietnam 67-69. Jim was a participant in “Homecoming: A Vietnam Vets Journey” and a good friend. After a valiant fight he lost his battle with his demons that followed him home from Vietnam.
